Stories of Interest

Angie Dickinson, German-American Treasure submitted by Martin A. Kelly

Besides being a fine actress, Angie Dickinson is a person of respect. So, in addition to our applause, she deserves a hand shake.

She was born Angeline Brown, to a German-American family, in Kulm, North Dakota, September 30, 1931. She attended Immaculate Heart College and, later Glendale University.

Her big chance came in 1945, when she won a local beauty contest, which brought her to the attention of Hollywood talent scouts. After years of bit parts and supporting roles, her big break came in the 1959 film "Rio Bravo" in which she played Katy, the dance hall singer with a past.

Better roles came her way both in movies and on TV. She portrayed Sergeant Pepper Anderson in the 1970's series "Police Woman." The studios were looking for spunky women who were gaunt, leggy and with husky voices, and she filled this bill.

She feels that her rise to fame was related to rise of feminism. While she was rumored to have been Frank Sinatra's and JFK's crush; the reports were space – fillers on check-out counter tabloids and not to be accepted as plausible. Actually, she draws a definite line with propriety in the media. She was quoted as saying "It is unsettling to see what is in the format of shows like "Jersey Shore" and their success indicates something lacking in the viewers."

Angie is going on 80. We all join in: "Lang soll sie leben!" "Lang soll sie leben!" "Dreimal, soll!"

TRAGIC FATE OF WWI U-BOAT

submitted by Martin A. Kelly

After 93 years, the saga of U-42 was learned by scuba divers off the Irish coast. In September 1917, the submarine was on a mission to lay mines off the harbor of Cork, Ireland—a co-belligerent against Germany in World War I.

An explosion of unknown origin crippled the ship and trapped its crew of 27 in a metal tomb. After the Armistice (1918), the American and Royal Navies attempted to remove the mines and other explosives and demolish the submarine.

Local, civilian scuba divers recently were startled to find the remnants of the U-42, showing signs of erosion and aquatic plant life infestation, but intact.

The divers said they hoped people would give the U-42 the respect it deserves as a war monument. In a gesture of remembrance, the divers laid a special plaque and wreath at the site over Christmas.

The Sacrament of Reconciliation

submitted by Jack McGee

Human kind has always recognized wrongful acts even if in only the most vague forms: Adam's "I heard the sound of you in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself" is the earliest record of the actions from guilt of wrong doing in Scripture. Every major organized religion recognizes the need for public and private awareness of our "nakedness" with the need to do penance and seek forgiveness: Yom Kippur for the Israelites; Lent, Penance and Reconciliation for Catholics, Orthodox and most Christians; Ramadan for Muslims.

For Latin Rite Catholics over the centuries, the concrete form in which the Church has exercised the power of forgiveness has varied considerably. During the first centuries, the Reconciliation of Christians to the faith community, who, after Baptism, had committed particularly grave sins, required rigorous discipline, often for years and often only once in a lifetime.

During the seventh century, Irish missionaries, inspired by the Eastern monastic tradition, took to continental Europe the "private" practice of penance, which does not require public and prolonged penitential works. This opened the way to repeated and regular receipt of this sacrament. In its main lines, this is the form of penance that the Church has practiced to our day.

We must understand that this sacrament is not a private sacrament of us alone. Sin is not only a personal offense against God but a fault against the community. We proclaim ourselves sinners before the Church on Earth "and to you, my brothers and sisters". Our serious transgressions separate us not only from God, but from the Body of Christ, the Church. God does not turn from us because of our sin, but through sin, we turn from Him. Thus true repentance, penance and reconciliation reunite us to God.

Central to our faith is the knowledge that we can be reconciled to Christ through penance and the forgiveness of our trespasses. St. Paul speaks of the "Ministry of Reconciliation" that Jesus bestowed upon him and the rest of the Apostles: "And all this is from God, Who has reconciled us to Himself through Christ and given us the ministry of reconciliation".
