NUMC unveils new maternity center

BY RIDGELY OCHS
ridgely.ochs@newsday.com

Ingrid Franz was amazingly poised in her leopard pajamas considering she had given birth only hours earlier — and her labor and delivery suite was teeming with officials.

Nassau County Executive Edward Mangano, NUMC chief executive Dr. Victor Politi and others were on hand yesterday to mark the official opening of Nassau University Medical Center's renovated maternity center.

Franz, 36, of East Rockaway, said she also delivered her two other children at NUMC because of the passionate and attentive staff, including her midwife, Barbara Charles. But the old facilities were merely "adequate."

"It was a hospital," she said.

By contrast, the new digs, which include seven spacious state-of-the-art rooms that allow a woman to labor and deliver in one place, are "comfortable and beautiful," she said. That's where her third child, Lauren Mary, was born.

The $2 million, 18,000-square-foot renovation funded by the state also includes three triage spaces and a postpartum area with 22 beds. A special birthing suite with two rooms fitted with tubs for water deliveries is being built.

Dr. Chaur-Dong Hsu, chairman of obstetrics and gynecology, said NUMC is the only hospital on Long Island and in Manhattan and Queens to offer "hydro birthing" in which the mother both labors and delivers her baby in water.

He was also proud of the East Meadow hospital's relatively low Caesarean-section rate. NUMC delivers about 1,500 babies every year, about 22 percent of which are by C-section, he said. On Long Island, the rate of C-sections is 42.5 percent; nationally, it's 32.8 percent, according to state and federal data. Surgical births carry risk of infection, increased bleeding and reactions to anesthesia and blood clots.

NUMC's director of nursing, Laura Kyrillidis, attributed the low C-section rate to weekly reviews of patients to see who might be at risk for complications and by working closely with prospective mothers.

Three years ago, Christina Bramante, a labor and delivery nurse, had her son, Matthew, at NUMC.

"Amazed" by the care she received, she left her job at another hospital to work there. About a year ago, her second child, Julia, was delivered at NUMC.

"And now," she said yesterday, "they have made it look beautiful."

CONGRATULATIONS!

Alex & Gerhard Schmitt are very proud of their daughter. Miss Carina became an Extraordinary Minister of Holy Communion at Kellenberg. It was a lovely mass with a great homily by Father Thomas Cardone followed by a brunch. They are so honored and thrilled that she was given this special opportunity.

Mother's Day at KOH

submitted Jan Kessler; photos by Muriel Fullam

The weather was absolutely spectacular and so was the roast beef dinner. KOH officially opened for the season and all the members and their friends were able to spend a beautiful day and enjoy a great Mother's Day dinner. Thank you to Heidi Umland, manager who coordinates all the activities of the day along with the staff who worked so hard in getting dinner prepared and served. Kathy Weinborg who we can always count on to plan a superb dinner along with Doris Petsche, Nick Colletti, Jerry Laudendorf and Mike Weinborg who always lend a helping hand in the kitchen. Jesse Heyd, Emily Weinborg, Julia Fields, and Jenna Richardson all helped serve 175 meals. The KOH Committee group did a great job on getting the new patio area completed just in time for all of us to have the extra space to relax and enjoy the best views of the Hudson River. We want to thank Marlene Bitterman for all the beautiful flowers and plantings around the patio and dining area and she continues these efforts all season long.

Special thank you to Fr. Bretone for celebrating a beautiful mass with us at Assmuth Hall and to Don and Dagmar Simon for providing the beautiful music. Thank you Mary Grace Janny who helped crown the Blessed Mother statue.

TRAGEDY AT MONTE CASSINO submitted by Martin A. Kelly

Ruins of the town of Cassino after the battle

If a critique of the conduct of World War II was made, the axis, with their brutality and inhumanity, would come off very badly. This does not mean, however, their adversary, the allies, were without fault. Take the case of the bombing of the monastery at Monte Cassino during the Italian campaign.

Italy is shaped like a boot with the Mediterranean on the west side; and, the Adriatic Sea on the east. Running from coast to coast, are mountain ranges. These land masses present natural barriers to the advancement of military forces. A quarter of the way up the Italian peninsula is a range that the German defenders used as fortifications which they called the Gustav Line. Seizure of western end would give the allies access to Cassino, the south terminus of highway E9 which lead to Rome. The level land would make the advance to the enemy capital a comparative walk-thon.

A dilemma (Zugzwang) arose; whether to bomb the Benedictine Abby (atop) which rose 1500 feet over Cassino.

Monte Cassino, founded in 925 by St. Benedict (480-547) was the prototype of Monasteries throughout Christendom. They saved civilization from lapsing into a stone age occasioned by the downfall of the Roman Empire. Monks would spend part of their day transcribing Christian texts and the most worthy of classic literature. They preserved theology, medicine, and ethics which would serve as the springboard for the university system.

The German commander, Lieut-General Fridolin von Senger und Etterlin, a member of the Third Order of St. Benedict, saw no military advantage in fortifying the abbey and left it alone. While American General Mark Clark felt the abbey was undefended; the British overrode his objection and ordered bombing raids. They claimed that being in the war since 1939, they had superior military intelligence that it was fortified.

On February 15, 1944, allied bombers achieved what infidels and anti-Christ could not do in 1400 years—the destruction of the monastery complex. The desecrated rubble and mortar, after the raid, served as excellent firing positions and the fighting kept on for 4 more months with heavy casualties on both sides. On May 18, 1944 the Germans fell back to a new line north of Rome, which had been declared an open city.

The abbey was reconstructed and rededicated on Oct 24, 1964. The Italian government and the order itself financed the restoration. Subsequent official investigations could not prove that the abbey had been fortified at all. The saddest part of this story was the death of several dozen Italian civilians in the air raid. They went into the abbey seeking a safe haven and found a death trap.
