I am sure all the winners will be back for the next game and hope all that missed will get a chance to play next time.

Join us on Fridays...we look forward to sampling all the great food items that everyone brings. If you don't feel like cooking come anyway because you never know who might be cooking something up on the barbeque.

New Member Day Mass, Ceremony & Brunch

Submitted by Jan Kessler; photo by Stephen Lovasz

The weather was just perfect at KOH for the New Members Day Mass and Brunch. Thank you to Doris Lechner who provided the introduction and did the readings at mass. Father Bretone, as usual, travelled from Brooklyn and we always appreciate his long journey to celebrate mass. During mass, Fr. Bretone was accompanied by Lilliam Manzernaro from Miami Lakes, Florida. Lilliam is a musician (guitarist) and song writer and we all enjoyed her sharing one of her most recent songs that she wrote. Fr. Bretone has celebrated 25 years as a priest this year and we congratulate him and thank him for providing us with spiritual guidance for the last 15 years with the NY Catholic Kolping Society along with his many other duties. We greatly appreciate Ted and Teddy Dengler's help with the collection along with Bernie & Christine Preisser who did the offering.

Following mass we welcomed in 54 new members into our NY Kolping Society and many of the Kolping Members/Sponsors were there to help—it seemed Assmuth Hall was at full capacity. President Katrina Dengler and Vice President Gerhard Schmitt introduced all the new members and Fr. Bretone welcomed them all into the NY Kolping Society.

The brunch was wonderful—a huge selection of food—omelets to order, bacon, sausage, homemade waffles with strawberries & whipped cream, roast beef, roasted chicken. Everyone seemed to sample a little of everything. Our cooks were all up bright and early to prepare all the specialties and we thank Kathy Weinborg, Jennifer and Michael Scheuermann, Doris Petsch and all the servers. They had their hands full and as usual did a super job!!!

Joseph Sartorius Scholarship Winner

Congratulations to STEPHEN RICHARDSON, winner of the Joseph Sartorius College Scholarship Essay Award. A check for $1,000 was presented to Stephen by Katrina Dengler at Father's Day Mass.

2014 TOPIC: Recently Edward Snowden released many documents regarding electronic surveillance by the United States Government. Even the head of government of a close ally, the Chancellor of the Federal Republic of Germany, Angela Merkel, has supposedly had her cell phone tapped by the United States Government. What is your opinion? Is this policy of surveillance justified? Is it absolutely wrong? Is it justified under certain circumstances?

Freedom is part of the "American Dream" that we Americans hold dear to our hearts as we value such a life of independence. Our nation, the United States of America, was created when the unjust and unruly governing power was held by the few over the many. Our founding fathers fought for this sovereignty with great ambition and belief in the ideas of life, liberty, and happiness. Being very cautious of power, they wanted to limit its abilities as much as possible, and creating the constitution to do just that. No matter who held power, the new but unique system of checks and balances would help ensure that such God given freedoms remained in place. Current day America is very different from the days of the thirteen colonies, but many believe our principles still hold true. One thing to look at is how our Constitution now has many amendments, which literally change the document as a whole. Laws are created every day and most seem to hinder the abilities we once had. Are the rights of the government now conflicting with the rights we all believe we have?

Recently there has been much debate on the important matter on whether our government, more specifically, the National Security Agency, is violating the Fourth Amendment's proscription on unreasonable searches and seizures through their surveillance program. Our governing body has come into the spotlight with released documents by Edward Snowden and the possible taping of the German Chancellor's cell phone. This led to the obtained knowledge that the government is indiscriminately collecting telephone metadata along with other information of millions without any particularly known suspicion of crime, misconduct or violation. It now seems more and more Americans are losing patriotism as they lose faith and trust in those who are supposed to be protecting us. The cost we give up for this protection has seemed too great lately.

I personally believe that freedom does come at a cost. We are not the only nation in the world, and others, who have nothing but hate for this nation, threaten our liberties every day. Terrorism is an ever-increasing evil that puts all in danger and the NSA tries all that it can to stop it. Using such intelligence as a surveillance program is uncanny and clever. Technology is an ever-increasing ability that our government is trying to use to gain knowledge that might be prudent to keeping us safe. By giving up our freedom of privacy we help to ensure that the general welfare and domestic tranquility is kept, two key parts to the preamble to our constitution. Times change, and this is the main reason why our nation has the ability to add amendments and laws. Even though I believe all this, I still believe how our government is going about this program makes it unjustified. Only when our nation's safety is being directly affected or there is just cause to believe so, is when surveillance on certain groups or individuals should be allowed. When millions are being closely watched, many of who do not impose any threat is how this program is becoming a problem. A new threat will arise; the threat of Americans taking action into their own hands to take back such rights. This very statement could even be another reason for this surveillance program. If that is a fact, that would give the American people the given right to fight back for our liberties. There is not just the threat of foreign terrorists but the threat from our own people who are becoming scared and bitter. How can we be a united nation when such fundamental principles are being tampered with?

The United States of America stands for many great principles and beliefs that should allow for its public to take great pride. The government, although a power, should be limited to such intrusions of privacy. It is the American people that have the greatest voice, not the government. It is our right to question the government especially when there is belief that they are limiting our liberties. Indeed, in times of national crisis, the government is allowed to limit the peoples' rights. The problem is we are not in a current state of direct national crisis, so why are our rights being taken away? The NSA surveillance program is a great idea, especially to decrease the effects of Terrorism. When it is being used to constantly pry into private lives, is when an issue arises. Freedom does have a cost and Americans must realize this. At the same time we must realize one of the rights granted to us is to question our governing body. When we raise enough voice of concern, this is when major change can occur. Freedom of speech is also one of our constitutional rights!

Stephen graduated from Hendrick Hudson High School with honors in 2012. Stephen then set even higher goals for himself for college. Now a pilot, he is attending Jacksonville University in Jacksonville, Florida and working towards a Bachelor of Science in Aviation Management with Flight Operations; which is also a Business degree. About to start his junior year he has already made Presidents list, is a current member and holding positions in Sigma Nu Fraternity, Alpha Eta Rho Aviation Professional Fraternity, Women in Aviation Society, and is an Aviation Ambassador to prospective students. This year he will also be a group leader to help freshmen with their first week and plans on joining the flight team. Working on his Commercial-Multiengine rating he has a long road ahead of him especially with the intention of becoming an international pilot. While having the time of his life he says he will never forget the great memories of growing up at KOH with his family, never feeling more at home. He is 3rd generation Kolping member, the son of one of our Board of Directors, long time Kolping member, Donna Richardson, and the grandson of the late George Koerner (former K88 and KOH cook, and the late Gertrude Koerner.

Philosophy also being one of his passions, he shares with us his favorite quote from the 19th century German philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche believing its meaning has great value when truly understood. "He who fights with monsters might take care lest he thereby become a monster. And if you gaze for long into an abyss, the abyss gazes also into you."

Father's Day at KOH

submitted by Jan Kessler; photos by Jan Kessler and Lou Colletti

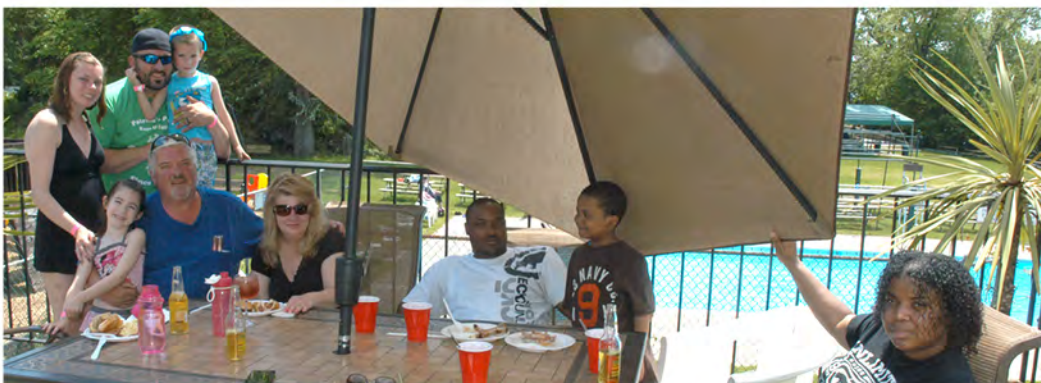

It was a very Happy Father's Day Celebration with over 140 members and families enjoying the wonderful lunch prepared by Jennifer Ahrens, Mike Scheuermann, Al Ahrens, and Evelyn Ryzerski. As usual Doris Petsche and Heidi Umland were up well before daybreak to start preparing for the crowd. After dinner there was plenty of room on the patio for everyone to relax and continue sharing family time with the kids and grandchildren. Lots of kids enjoyed the pool. Father Bretone celebrated mass at 3:30. It was great to have Don Simons there to provide the music along with our group of singers Edward Specht, Joe Szoldatits, Peter Mersits, and Frank Kurcz.

After mass Katrina Dengler presented the Joseph Sartorius Scholarship Essay Award check to Steven Richardson, son of Donna Richardson. Stephen is attending the University of Jacksonville in Florida where he is continuing his education in aviation management.

Movie Night at KOH

submitted by Jan Kessler; photos by Jan Kessler and Marie Considine

It was a spectacular evening at this year's KOH Movie Night. Over 550 attended a wonderful family event that included a great BBQ, pool and the popular movie "FROZEN". This was the fourth year that we have to thank Kathy and Greg Fuchek for organizing an evening that was thoroughly enjoyed by all the parents and children. All our cooks/grillers were busy for hours keeping up with the demand for hamburgers, bratwurst and salads. Nick Colletti, Kathy Weinborg, Jennifer Ahrens, Mike Scheuermann, Max Fuchek, Lou Colletti, Doris Petsche, Heidi Umland—Thank you to all. The extra helping hands—Joan Dengler, Richey Provolonis, Beverly Fuchek, Marie Considine for all they did. Kolping is blessed with so many dedicated volunteers! We are already looking forward to next year!

Stories of Interest

MAX SCHMELING: Ein grossartiger Mensch (1905-2004) submitted by Martin A. Kelly

The Sands Hotel in Las Vegas (1/12/89) was the proving ground for the saying; "a good deed never goes unnoticed." The host Henri Levin, a well-to-do German-Jewish refugee, wanted to honor his childhood protector the former world heavy weight boxing champion, Max Schmeling. Fifty years earlier riotous snobs had pillaged and destroyed Jewish owned businesses throughout Germany in what was labeled "Kristallnacht." Mr. Levin's father, a friend of Schmeling, asked Max to harbor the family until the racial furor had died down and they could apply for an exit visa to flee Germany. This was only one of the acts of humanitarianism performed by this illustrious boxing icon.

After he lost the title of world heavy weight boxing champion in a re-match with the contender Joe Louis (NYC, 6/22/38), Max returned to Germany to a cool reception. He was a political; had married a non-Aryan, the Czechoslovak movie star, Anny Ondra; had refused to fire his friend and manager, Joe Jacobs, who was a Jew; and, now by losing the heavy weight crown to a negro, he disproved the master race theory of the National Socialists. Furthermore, he was accused of aiding "criminals and Jews."

War broke out in September 1939; although his talents qualified him to be a physical instructor, the Bonzi (big wigs) made him into a parachutist-trooper (Fallschirm truppen). He participated in the costly invasion of Crete in which he injured his knee for which he was mustered out; but was used for "public relations" assignments.

The British propoganda network claimed the Italian boxer, whom Schmeling had fought in New York, Primo Canera, had been shot as a partisan. He was very much alive and a meeting with him and Max disproved the hoax. Another time, Max was sent to the Vatican to patch up a riff caused by the disregard of papal protocol by some untrained officer. Max had an audience with Pius XII which was cordial and the Pope told him he prayed for world peace. On reporting home, Max was asked to misquote the Pope as saying he was praying for a Nazi victory. Max refused and in return, Max was able to save a limited number of otherwise helpless victims of tyranny.

After the war, Max returned to boxing briefly, and attempted some business ventures. His big break came when Jim Farley, a friend from the NYS Boxing Commission and former U.S. Post Master General offered him management of Coca Cola's overseas operation in Germany.

With a steady substantial income, Max's generosity came to the fore front. He donated freely to charity and sports organizations. He was particularly generous to former boxing adversaries, especially, his biggest challenger, Joe Louis, who did not fare well at all financially. At Louis' funeral, Schmeling had sent his widow $5,000. Max Schmeling—a true legend.
