POEM BY PATRICIA MINER GILL

Patricia, as she is known loves Kolping On Hudson and rents out a room. She is pretty much there all spring, summer and into the fall. She wrote this beautiful poem about our eagles last spring.

"In The Eagles' Shadow"

Like a live mobile, they circle above me. The river breeze off Montrose Point provides their effortless ride. The green lacework of leaves allows just enough sun to detect their presence when my neck no longer permits my head to tilt back and see the splendid air show above. The intermittent bugle type calls from above bathe my spirit in song as I blend into the woods...Beneath the Shadow of Eagles.

Disaster at Bari submitted by Martin A. Kelly

War dramatizes man's inhumanity to his fellow man. This was the case at the Port of Bari, Italy, the night of December 2, 1943.

World War II was in its fourth year and Germany was on the defensive. The Allies inched their way up the Italian Peninsula capturing the large Port of Bari on the East or Adriatic side. Assuming that the Germans were incapable of launching an air raid, the allies paid scant attention to FLAK or fighter defenses. They even illuminated the port at night to expedite the unloading of vessels docked there. Seizing this opportunity, the Luftwaffe marshaled fifty Junker (88) bombers from Northern Italy and the Balkans and honed in on the port; flying in under the radar.

The result was a little "Pearl Harbor". Within an hour, seventeen merchant ships were sunk and six badly damaged—the port facilities were in shambles. The worse damage and loss of life however came from an allied source. The cargo ship, "S.S. John Harvey", was loaded with a secret cargo—poison gas. A direct hit by one of the raiders detonated the diabolic cargo into a volcanic cloud of gases and debris.

There was no ships manifest and the crew of the Harvey had been killed. The condition of the survivors of the blast dumbfounded the hospitals and aid stations with their grotesque lesions and respiratory symptoms. The yellowish ooze from the charred wounds gave the gas its name "mustard gas". It had been used in World War I; the allies explained, later, it was to be a retaliatory weapon if the Axis used it first. The actual number of deaths, injuries to civilians and military and damage to the ecology has never been estimated. It serves as a reminder of man's inhumanity to man.

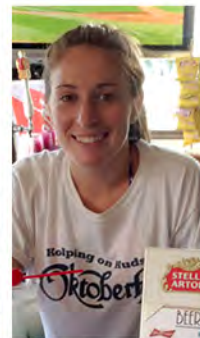

Junkers Ju 88, the aircraft employed in the raid.

4th of July at KOH

submitted by Muriel Fullam, photos by Charles Ruppman & Muriel Fullam

Thank you to Jennifer Scheuermann, Mike Scheuermann, Helmi Pinner, Gerry Ladenhauf, Gerhard Schmitt, Al Ahrens, Richie Povilonis, Doris Petsche and Heidi Umland for the great barbecue on July 4th. On this very hot, hot day they served over 125 meals to our members and their friends. Hamburgers, hot dogs, bratwurst, ribs and chicken were served along with salads and beans. A special thank you to Heidi Umland and Doris Petsche. They get up very early in the morning to make fresh homemade German potato salad and macaroni salad for us. Thanks also to those of you that donated desserts—Lillian, Dorothy Glomann, Lou Colletti and Eveylyn Ryzerski. Everything was delicious! Thank you to Christel Scheuermann for her work all summer at the pool and especially on this hot day when she had so many customers. Jerry Fullam, Danielle Kern and Christine Kern made us happy with all kinds of drinks at the bar. And thanks to all of you who came to celebrate the 4th at KOH.
